“Fire All Out” Reports

In the event that a small fire occurs on site and is extinguished by site personnel, please contact the London Fire Brigade (LFB) to advise them of a ‘Fire All Out’.

There is a simple process to follow:

- Call 999 and once through to the Fire Service operator, state the call is being made to report a fire all out.
- The call will then be referred to your local LFB station, from which they will send a crew to confirm that the fire has been extinguished and that no further risk remains.
- Only one fire engine will be sent and this will not be under blue lights (emergency signal) on the basis that this is not an emergency response. There is no charge for LFB attendance at a ‘Fire All Out’.

In addition to providing assurance that there is no further risk from the fire, these calls also enable the LFB to build up a picture of fires and in some cases, identify trends with specific pieces of plant and equipment that appear to present an abnormal risk of fire.

Any fires that cannot be extinguished safely should be left to the LFB – do not put yourself at risk, dial 999.
